Here Are 101 Keys to Japanese Language and Culture

You'll find culture-specific expressions such as sannin yoreba monju no chie ("three people together have the wisdom of Buddha"), nature-related phrases such as kumo o tsukamu yoo ("like grasping a cloud"), and expressions that reflect traditional activities such as hitori sumo o toru ("to wrestle a one-man sumo [match]"), and you'll learn why these common idioms have come to mean what they do.

The charmingly illustrated idioms have been arranged into six sections—including: ■ Relating to Nature ■ Creatures Large and Small ■ From Place to Place ■ and more. You'll gain perspectives on what the Japanese choose to describe (rice ladles, cranes, bubbles...) and how they think about their world (concepts such as beauty, sensitivity, and obligation).

Each idiom—written in both romanized and Japanese forms—is accompanied by an explanation and then incorporated into a dialogue to illustrate the idiom's everyday use. These dialogues facilitate understanding and make the idioms come alive!

This entertaining text offers a wealth of linguistic and cultural information for anyone studying Japanese, going to Japan, or in contact with Japanese friends or colleagues.

Preface

The picturesque, idiomatic phrase captures the true essence of a society better than its equivalent prosaic description. Saying, for example, in Japanese, "it was packed like sushi," to describe the morning commuter train rush, is a more colorful, and, we think, preferable way of saying, "it was very crowded." Besides, "packed like sushi" (sushizume) comes directly from the culture; virtually every Japanese knows that sushi is packed tightly in boxes typically sold in take-out sushi shops and at train stations.

Thus the idiom resonates; it quickly establishes rapport. A mastery of Japanese idioms will help you understand the culture and speak a more authentic style of Japanese.

When you use idioms such as sushizume among your Japanese friends, colleagues, and business associates, you create emotional bonds that bring you closer to their culture. Since the Japanese are conditioned to believe that no people outside of the Japanese islands really know or care deeply about their culture, your use of a Japanese idiom in the appropriate context will both astound and delight them. More important, your command of Japanese idioms can lead to a deeper understanding of the Japanese people.

In this book, we introduce 101 popular Japanese idioms and expressions that we believe are both interesting and useful to students of Japanese language and culture. Each idiom is first introduced in Romanization, followed by Japanese orthography, and then a literal translation. Literal translations are deliberate, since combined with the visual, they lead you to the source of the phrase, which comes directly out of Japanese mythology, nature imagery, animal associations, or the human body as metaphor.

We have purposely translated suzume no namida as "tears of a sparrow," for example, because suzume no namida literally—and naturally—and in a Japanese way, says "small." Had we translated it loosely to mean "a tad," a great deal of the flavor and texture of the phrase would have been lost in the rendering.

Our literal translations of Japanese idioms are what set this book apart from other books on this same subject. In addition, background information on the origin or popular usage of each idiom offers valuable insights into Japanese culture.

We have also added a sample text to provide a context in which the idiom is generally used. To assist you in studying the language, sample text is presented in three stages: Romanization, Japanese orthography, and finally English. Translations and narratives are the authors' personal interpretations.

The book can be read from beginning to end in one sitting, or can be read in whatever order you choose. For handy reference, an alphabetical index of idioms as well as an index of idioms organized by key images are provided.

Extra study hint: After you've looked at each entry, go through the book a second time and place your hand over the top part of the left-hand page. See if you can recite the idiom in Japanese simply by looking at the illustration.

This book is intended for anyone who has an interest in learning more about the Japanese language and culture. Whether you are currently enrolled in a Japanese language course, are planning a trip to Japan, are curious about Japanese philosophy, or simply want to get to know your Japanese friends better, you will refer to this anthology of colorful Japanese idioms again and again.

Section One

Relating to Nature

Things That Grow 1-15

Water, Wind, and Clouds 16-24

1.

Gomasuri

ごますり

1.

"sesame grinding"

(ingratiating oneself, apple-polishing, overtly flattering, toadying, sucking up to one's superiors)

When a person makes an overtly ingratiating remark, he or she is "grinding sesame seeds." Others call attention to the gomasuri either by saying the word, by (nonverbally) making motions with the fist over the palm of the other hand (simulating the grinding of roasted sesame seeds with a pestle and mortar), or by doing both. Like the messy sesame seeds ground up in the mortar, the person seeking favor is sticking to everything (one).

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal/male)

A: Katoo-san iyoiyo kakarichoo ni shooshin rashii desu yo.

B: Yappari soo desu ka. Koko sannen kan zutto gomasuri o yatte kita n da kara, sorosoro kakarichoo ni naru daroo to wa omottemashita kedo ne.

A: 加藤さんいよいよ係長に昇進らしいですよ。

B: やっぱりそうですか。ここ三年間ずっとごますりをやってきたんだから、そろそろ係長になるだろうとは思ってましたけどね。

A: I hear Mr. Kato is finally going to be promoted to section chief.

B: Just as I thought. I was thinking he would make section chief soon since he's been apple-polishing for the past three years.

Hana ni Arashi

花に嵐

2.

“Blossoms bring storms.”

(Life often brings misfortune at the time of great happiness.)

This fatalistic insight is a shortened version of tsuki ni muragumo, hana ni arashi, which is literally translated, “Clouds over the moon, storm over blossoms.” It often seems that misfortune looms behind even the happiest moments.

Sample text

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Kekkon shite isshuukan de kyuuni gashujin ga nyuuin to wa akinodoku nee.

B: Shiawase ippai no tokoro ni zannen nee. Demo maa “hana ni arashi” to yuu kurai da kara, kooyuu koto mo unmei de shikata ga nai wa ne.

A: 結婚して一週間で急に御主人が入院とはおきのどくねえ。

B: 幸せいっぱいのところに残念ねえ。でもまあ『花に嵐』と言うくらいだから、こういうことも運命で仕方がないわね。

A: It's too bad. Only married a week and her new husband got hospitalized.

B: Too bad, when she was so happy. But as they say, “Life often brings misfortune at the time of great happiness.” It's simply fate. You can't help it.

Hana yori Dango

花よりだんご

3.

"Sweets are preferred to flowers."

(The practical is preferred over the aesthetic.)

Every spring on the day of "flower viewing," Japanese traditionally travel to the countryside or visit parks to appreciate the beauty of nature. Yet human nature being what it is, people seem to show considerably more interest in the food than in the flowers.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B= male)

A: Iya da wa. Aki-chan tara sekkaku ohanami ni kita noni, tabete bakari ite.

B: Akio, omae wa yappari hana yori dango no taipu da na.

A: いやだわ、あきちゃんたらせっかくお花見に来たのに、食べてばかりいて。

B: 昭男、お前はやっぱり花よりだんごのタイプだな。

A: Oh boy, Aki-chan is only interested in food, while we came to appreciate the cherry blossom trees in full bloom.

B: Akio, you're the type who prefers the practical over the aesthetic, aren't you?

Imo [no Ko] o Arau Yoo

芋 [の子] を洗うよう

4.

“like washing [a bucketful of] potatoes”

(so crowded you can hardly turn around, jam-packed, mobbed with people)

Summer weekends at the beach in Japan are impossible. The beaches are so crowded that you can hardly make space for your beach mat. When hordes of people play in the waist-deep ocean waters, wave after wave jostles them into each other. This commotion resembles a wooden bucketful of potatoes sloshing around while being washed by the agitator. Usage is restricted to water-related scenes.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Shichigatsu gejun no nichiyoobi, natsuyasumi ni haitta node, kodomozure no kazoku ga ooku, kaisui yakujaō wa imo [no ko] o arau yaona kanzatsuburi to natta.

七月下旬の日曜日、夏休みに入ったので、子供連れの家族が多く、海水浴場は芋 [の子] を洗うような混雑ぶりとなった。

Since it was a Sunday toward the end of July and summer vacation, there were a lot of families with kids, and the beach was jam-packed.

5.

Iwanu ga Hana

言わぬが花

5.

“Not saying is the flower.”

Since one can never really “take back” what one says, there is a high premium on thinking things through before opening one’s mouth. Much harm and nonsense can result from ill-chosen words. Thus the philosophical observation that “Not saying is the flower.”

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Kare ni wa yappari himitsu ni shite okoo to omou no.
B: Soo ne. “Iwanu ga hana” te kotowaza mo arushi ne.

A: 彼にはやっぱり秘密にしておこうと思うの。
B: そうね。「言わぬが花」ってことわざもあるしね。

A: I think I’ll keep it a secret from him.
B: That’s good. You know the proverb, “Silence is golden.”

6.

Korogaru Ishi ni Koke Musazu

転がる石に苔むさず

6.

"A stone that rolls gathers no moss."

(Perseverance pays off; patience is a virtue.)

For the Japanese, moss is something to be admired. Associated with beauty, moss grows on rocks and in pathways of old temples in places like Kyoto. Yet the stone that continues to tumble will never have moss. So this expression is often used to admonish others to stay put, to continue on in the same job. Ironically, this expression is also used by some Japanese to mean the very opposite, i.e., the meaning understood by Americans: keep moving or you'll get old.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Ichida nyuusha shitara, shooshoo taihenna koto ga atte mo, zutto sono kaisha ni tsutameta hoo ga ii. "Korogaru ishi ni koke musazu" to iwareru yooni shakuba o amari kawaru no wa konomashii koto dewa nai.

一度入社したら、少々大変なことがあっても、ずっとその会社で勤めたほうがいい。「転がる石に苔むさず」と言われるように職場を余り変えるのは好ましいことではない。

Once a person is employed, he or she is better off staying in the same company even when facing hardships. As the proverb "A stone that rolls gathers no moss" goes, it is not advisable to job-hop.

7.

Minoru hodo Atama no Sagaru Inaho Kana

実る程頭の下がる稲穂かな

7.

"The mature rice plant lowers its head."

(Maturity brings humility and respect for others.)

When rice is mature and ready to harvest, the heaviness at the top of the plant pulls it down low to the ground. Japanese see this as analogous to how the wisdom of years fills a man with humility and causes his head to bow heavily in his deep respect for life and nature.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual A=female, B=ma e)

A: Kanda irashita Tayama fukushachoo ne, rippa na kata rashii wa nee. Moashibun nai hitogara tte uwasa yo.

B: Soo na n da Sore ni tottemo kenkyode, ibatteiru tokoro ga mattaku nai hito rashii ne.

A: "Minoru hodo atama no sagaru inaho kana" tte kotowaza ga pittari na kata yo.

A: 今度いらした田山副社長ね、立派な方らしいわねえ。申し分ない人柄ってうわさよ。

B: そうなんだ。それにとっても謙虚で、いばっているところが全くない人らしいね。

A: 「実る程頭の下がる稲穂かな」ってことわざがピッタリの方よ。

A: You know the new vice-president Tayama. I hear he's a wonderful person. They say his personality is just ideal.

B: I agree. Besides, he seems to be humble and never arrogant.

A: He's the type that perfectly fits the proverb, "The mature rice plant lowers its head."

Nemawashi

根回し

8.

“preparing the roots for transplanting”

(informally securing prior approval, checking with everyone who counts before formal presentation, covering all the bases)

Nemawashi now is used worldwide to characterize the consensus-building nature of Japanese business practices. Literally, nemawashi means cutting off excess roots and wrapping the remaining roots with a straw mat for protection when transplanting the tree. In business terms it means an informal solicitation of agreement before formal submission of approval at a meeting.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Kyoo no kaigi umaku iku ka naa.

B: Daijoubu daroo. Kanari nemawashi ni jikan o kakete kitashi, konkai no purojekuto wa buchou mo noriki da kara.

A: 今日の会議うまくいかなあ。

B: 大丈夫だろう。かなり根回しに時間をかけてきたし、今回のプロジェクトは部長も乗り気だから。

A: I wonder if today's meeting is going to go well.

B: I think it will be fine. I spent a lot of time covering all the bases, and I know the manager likes our proposal.

Ne mo Ha mo Nai

根も葉もない

9.

“without roots or leaves”

(groundless, unsubstantiated)

Roots give support to a tree much as facts give support to claims and allegations. Leaves validate the health of a tree, proving its life and vitality. With neither support (roots) nor evidence (leaves), the (tree) allegation cannot stand.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A= male, B= female)

A: Yamada-san no okusan, uwaki shiteru rashii yo.

B: Sonna koto, uso yo. Mattaku ne mo ha mo nai uwasa ni kimatteru wa.

A: 山田さんの奥さん、浮気してるらしいよ。

B: そんなこと、うそよ。全く根も葉もないうわさに決まってるわ。

A: Mrs. Yamada seems to be having an affair.

B: That's not true. That's a groundless rumor, for sure.

Sakura

さくら

10.

“cherry blossom”

(a shill, a plant, a confederate)

This expression originates from the Edo period. A paid audience hired to applaud and cheer the show was seated in the section of the theater called “sakura.”

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B=male)

A: Nani ga sonnani okashii no kashira. Ano hito sakki kara zutto waratteru wa

B: Sakura janai ka. Okashikumo nai mandan ni hitori de geragera waratteru n da kara.

A: 何がそんなにおかしいのかしら。あの人さっきからずっと笑ってるわ。

B: さくらじゃないか。おかしくもない漫談にひとりでゲフゲフ笑ってるんだから。

A: What's so funny? That guy's been laughing awfully long.

B: Isn't he a shill? He's the only one laughing at the boring monologue.

Sanshoo wa Kotsubu de mo [Piririto] Karai

山椒は小粒でも [ぴりりと] 辛い

11.

“Japanese peppers are hot, though small.”

(small but powerful, a mighty mite, a person of ability although small in size)

Despite the small size of the Japanese pepper, it packs a powerful, spicy punch. The phrase suggests that size isn't the only determinant of strength or ability.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Yaru naa. Kachoo mata shooshin da tte. Iyoiyo buchou rashi

B: “Sanshoo wa kotsubu de mo karai” tte ne.

A: やるなあ、課長また昇進だって。いよいよ部長らしい。

B: 「山椒は小粒でも辛い」ってね。

A: Great! Our section chief has been promoted again. Looks like he's going to be a manager now

B: Well, they say, “Japanese peppers are hot, though small.”

12.

Takane no Hana

高嶺の花

12.

"flower on a high peak"

(unrealizable desire, an unobtainable object, something out of one's reach)

Wistfully, a prize you can see but simply cannot reach. The beautiful flower is so far away that there is no real hope of picking it. Used to describe the object of desire which is completely out of reach.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B=male)

A: Yamamoto-kun ne, Yoko-san ni kataomai na n da tte.

B: Sorya, minoranu koi da. Ate ga Yoko-san ja, takane no hana da kara naa.

A: 山本君ね、洋子さんに片思いなんだって。

B: そりゃ、実らぬ恋だ。相手が洋子さんじゃ、高嶺の花だからなあ。

A: You know Yamamoto, right? The rumor is he's in love with Yoko, but it's a one-way affair

B: Oh boy! That kind of love is fruitless. His heart may be set on Yoko, but she really is an unobtainable prize.

Take o Watta Yoo

竹を割ったよう

13.

“as clean as a split bamboo”

(honest, frank, decisive, a straight-shooter)

When a bamboo pole is split lengthwise, the cut is true and straight—a clean split. Take o watta yoo describes a frank, decisive, and morally righteous person—usually in reference to a man, but sometimes in reference to a woman.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Nihonjin ga konomu danshi no imaeji wa, take o watta yoo na seikaku de, hakkiri shiteite ketsudanryoku no aru hito dearu koto ga ooi. Shikashi, ippan ni josei ni wa take o watta yoo na seikaku to yuu yori, mushiro yasashisa ga nozomareru.

日本人が好む男性のイメージは、竹を割ったような性格で、はっきりしていて決断力のある人であることが多い。しかし、一般に女性には竹を割ったような性格というより、むしろやさしさが望まれる。

The male image that the Japanese prefer is generally of a man who is honest, frank, and decisive. In a woman, however, they generally value tenderness much more highly than frankness or decisiveness.

14.

Uri Futatsu

瓜二つ

14.

"two halves of a cucumber"

(two peas in a pod, Tweedledum and Tweedledee, frick and frack)

Nature provides ample evidence of perfect symmetry. Split lengthwise, the two halves of a fruit or vegetable are perfectly identical. When two people are so much alike in appearance, they are uri futatsu.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Ano kyaadai wa futatsu chigai da kedo, mattaku uri futatsu da nee. Kono aida, machigaechatte ne. Komatta yo, hontoni!

A: あの兄弟は二つちがいがけど、全く瓜二つがねえ。この間、まちがえちゃってね。困ったよ、ほんとに!

A: Those brothers are two years apart, yet they're as alike as two peas in a pod. The other day I mistook one for the other, and was I embarrassed!

15.

Yoraba Taiju no Kage

寄らば大樹の陰

15.

“[Seek shelter in] the shade of a big tree.”

(Choose secure and solid protection.)

Shade is figurative for protection. The tree you choose should be important and highly placed within your organization or in society in general. This expression is close in nuance to “it never hurts to have friends in high places.”

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Saikin no gakusei wa gakusha no kenkyuu teema dewa naku, gakusha no chimeido ya seijiryoku ni yotte kyooju o erabu keikob ga aru. “Yoraba taiju no kage” to yuu wake ka.

最近の学生は学者の研究テーマではなく、学者の知名度や政治力によって教授を選ぶ傾向がある。「寄らば大樹の陰」というわけか。

There is a tendency among current students to choose an academic mentor not because of the professor's research interests but because of the professor's fame or political clout. I suppose it's because they say, “Seek shelter in the shade of a big tree.”

16.

Ame ga Furoo to Yari ga Furoo to 雨が降ろうと槍が降ろうと

16.

"even if rain falls or spears fall"

(no matter what, under any circumstances)

This expression reflects the firm determination Japanese are expected to have toward achieving their goal. Once the objective is set, after extensive deliberation and consideration, "come hell or high water," the project will be brought to a successful conclusion.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Sankagetsu mo mae kara yotei shiteita ryokoo da kara, ashita wa ame ga furoo to yari ga furoo to shuppatsu suru tsumori da.

三か月も前から予定していた旅行だから、明日は雨が降ろう
と槍が降ろうと出発するつもりだ。

I've been planning this trip for three months, so I intend to leave tomorrow, no matter what.

17.

Ame Futte Ji Katamaru

雨降って地固まる

17.

“Rain firms the ground.”

(Adversity builds character; the more challenges successfully met, the stronger one or a relationship becomes.)

Ame futte ji katamaru is often said to the bride and groom on their wedding day. In addition to meaning that bad experiences may actually be good, the expression admonishes young newlyweds that, for better or for worse, the ties that bind are strengthened through tough times.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal)

A: Kekkan seikatsu wa mochiron barairo no koto bakari dewa nai deshou. Ame futte ji katamaru to iwaremasu yooni jinsei no kuro o wakeatte suenagaku oshiawase ni.

A: 結婚生活はもちろんバラ色のことばかりではないでしょう。雨降って地固まると言われますように人生の苦勞を分け合って末長くお幸せに。

A: Married life will not always be rosy. But as the saying “Rain firms the ground” goes, I hope you will enjoy a happy and long relationship as you share the hardships of life.

18.

Kaze no Tayori

風の便り

18.

"message carried on the wind"

(a rumor, a story without source)

A letter delivered from the God of the Wind. Used to suggest news from an unnamed or an easily forgotten source. No direct line of communication exists. This expression compares with "a little birdie told me."

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A= male, B= female)

- A: Kyonen Amerika e kaetta Sumisu-san, ima doo shiteru ka naa.
 B: Kaze no tayori de wa daigaku ni modotte benkyoo shiteru rashii wa yo. Doka no daigaku ka shiranai kedo.
- A: 去年アメリカへ帰ったスミスさん、今どうしてるかなあ。
 B: 風の便りでは、大学にもどって勉強しているらしいわよ。どこの大学か知らないけど。
- A: You know that guy Smith, who went back to the U.S. last year? I wonder what he's up to nowadays.
 B: I heard a rumor that he went back to school. I don't know which university, though.

Kumo o Tsukamu Yoo

雲をつかむよう

19.

“like grasping a cloud”

(wishful thinking, impossible dream)

Since nobody can actually grasp a cloud, the expression denotes impossibility. From afar, a cloud has shape and form. Close-up, its gossamer essence dissipates at the touch. So when a not-so-talented sixteen-year-old declares that she's going to become a movie star, you can respond by saying it's a *kumo o tsukamu yoo*na dream—a mild warning that the ambition or goal is highly unlikely to be realized.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=son, B=mother)

A: Sakkyokuka ni naroo ka na.

B: Sonna kumo o tsukamu yoona koto bakari kangaeteiru kara itsu made tatte mo hitoridachi dekinai n desu yo.

A: 作曲家になろうかな。

B: そんな雲をつかむようなことばかり考えているからいつまでたってもひとりだちできないんですよ。

A: You know, maybe I'll become a composer.

B: (Scolding) All you ever think about is impossible dreams like that! No wonder you've never been able to become financially independent.

Mizu ni Nagasu

水に流す

20.

“to set things adrift”

(to forgive and forget, to let bygones be bygones)

A river carries bad memories away. By setting adrift the pain of a romantic breakup or the betrayal by a once-trusted friend, you start things anew. Once into the river's flow, the thing-to-forget heads downstream, never to return.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal/female)

A: Desukara, sore wa mao wasuremashoo. Mukashi no koto wa mizu ni nagashite, mata yari naashimashoo ya.

B: Soo ne. Sore ga ichiban ii wa ne.

A: ですから、それはもう忘れましょう。昔のことは水に流して、またやり直しましょうよ。

B: そうね。それが一番いいわね。

A: So let's forget about those days. Let bygones be bygones and try it again.

B: Yes. That looks like the best idea.

Mizu no Awa

水の泡

21.

"bubbles on the water"

(all for nothing, effort in vain)

Stopping by a brook and observing water bubbles forming and disappearing, a Japanese may associate those bubbles with the transient nature of life. Used poetically to acknowledge that a great effort was in vain and now has vanished like bubbles on the water.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A—female, B=male)

A: Michio-kun no sakkaa ne, are dake doryokushite shiai ni sonaeta noni, toojitsu ame de chuushi ni natta n da tte.

B: Sankogetsu no doryoku mo mizu no awa ka. Kawaiisooni na.

A: 道男君のサッカーね、あれだけ努力して試合にそなえたのに、当日雨で中止になったんだって。

B: 二か月の努力も水の泡か。かわいそうにな。

A: This thing about Michio's soccer. He practiced so hard, but the game got cancelled because of rain

B: Three months' effort was all in vain! Poor thing.

Mizu o Utta Yoo

水を打ったよう

22.

“as if after scattered water”

(so quiet you could hear a pin drop, dead silence)

When performing the Tea Ceremony, it's customary to scatter water along the entrance path. This ritual indicates preparation. The water cleans; it moistens the soil to contain the dust. It also deadens the sound

Sample text:

(Style: written/informa)

Kontesuto no nyuushoasha no happyoo ga hajimatta.
Shikoisha ga maiku no mae ni tatsu to, kajoo wa issun mizu o utta yoon shizukesa ni natta.

コンテストの入賞者の発表がはじまった。司会者がマイクの前に立つと、会場は一瞬水を打ったような静けさになった。

The contest winners were about to be announced. When the Master of Ceremonies stepped up to the microphone, the crowd got so quiet you could hear a pin drop.

Mizu Shoobai

水商売

23.

“water business”

(entertainment business, a chancy trade)

Running water is not thought of as having a fixed rate of flow. Sometimes the water comes out strong, sometimes weak. Such is the “fluid” nature of the income levels for certain businesses. Mizu shoobai includes a variety of entertainment businesses—tea houses, entertainment spots, bars, massage parlors, and houses of prostitution. According to another etymological source, these businesses were situated along riverbanks, and thus the “water business.”

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Mori-san no musukosan ne, kekkon shitai rashii kedo goryoashin ga hantai shiteru tte uwasa nee.

B: Soo na no yo. Nanishira, ate ga mizu shoobai no de rashii no yo.

A: 森さんの息子さんね、結婚したいらしいけどご両親が反対してるってうわさねえ。

B: そうなのよ。なにしろ、相手が水商売の出らしいのよ。

A: Mrs. Mori's son. It appears he wants to get married, but both parents are against it.

B: That's right. I hear that the bride-to-be is from the entertainment business.

Yakeishi ni Mizu

焼け石に水

24.

"water on a red-hot stone"

(a drop in the bucket, completely ineffective)

A drop of water thrown on a red-hot stone is of no consequence. Instead of cooling the stone, the drop of water evaporates in an instant. Yakeishi ni mizu expresses a grossly inadequate remedy to a problem.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Kongetsu wa monosugoi akaji na na yo. Sukashi shokuhī o setsuyaku shite mita kedo, yakeishi ni mizu de doonimo naranai wa

A: 今月はものすごい赤字なのよ。少し食費を節約してみたけど、焼け石に水でどうにもならないわ。

A: We are 'way in the red this month. I tried to spend less for groceries, but it's a drop in the bucket. I just don't know what to do.

Section Two

Creatures Large and Small

Birds and Beasts 25-36

Fish, Frogs, and Others 37-46

Ashimoto kara Tori ga Tatsu

足もとから鳥が立つ

25.

"Birds fly up from under one's feet."

(an unexpected departure, a surprise, a sudden happening)

What could be more startling than a pheasant or other ground-nesting bird flying up suddenly from in front of you? That's the feeling Japanese experience when a friend or an acquaintance leaves without warning. To be caught unawares.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Tanari no manshon ni sundeita Kawakami-san, hikkoshita no?

B: Ee. Kyuuni Shidonii ni tenkin de ne. Mattaku "ashimoto kara tori ga tatsu" to wa, ano koto ne. Aru hi kyuuni satto hikiharatchatta no yo.

A: となりのマンションに住んでいた川上さん、引っ越したの?

B: スス 急にシドニーに転勤でね。全く『足もとから鳥が立つ』とは。あのことね ある日急にサッとひき払っちゃったのよ

A: Did Kawakami move, the guy next door in your condominium?

B: Yeah. He was unexpectedly transferred to Sydney. Such a surprise, you know. Suddenly one day he simply moved out.

Hane o Nobasu

羽根を伸ばす

26.

"to stretch one's wings"

(to cut loose, to get rid of inhibition)

Away from home or the office, without constraints of position in society or conformity of rank within the Japanese company, one is more free to be adventurous. Hane o nobasu carries connotations of "sowing a few wild oats" as well as "letting one's hair down."

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Nihonjin wa shigoto nado de isogashii no ga suki da keredo, toki ni wa shigata ya katei o hanarete, ryakoo ya reja o tanoshinde, hane o nobasu koto mo aru.

日本人は仕事などで忙しいのが好きだけれど、時には仕事や家庭をはなれて、旅行やレジャーを楽しんで、羽根を伸ばすこともある。

Japanese prefer to be busy at work; but sometimes when they set foot outside the worksite and away from their homes to travel or pursue leisure activities, they really cut loose.

Karite Kita Neko no Yoo

借りてきた猫のよう

27.

“like a borrowed cat”

(as shy and quiet as a kitten)

If a cat has a distant and aloof personality even within its own home, imagine how remote it would act in a strange place. The expression describes a shy, timid person who is not at home in his surroundings.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Asobi ni kiteiru Takahashi-san no takara no Masao-kun, tottemo otonashii n da tte?

B: Soo rashii wa ne. Uchi de wa genki sugite komatteru rashii kedo, yoso no uchi de wa karite kita neko no yooni otonashii n datte.

A: 遊びにきてる高橋さんのところの正夫君、とってもおとなしいんだって?

B: そうらしいわね。うちでは元気すぎて困ってるらしいけど、よそのうちでは借りてきた猫のようにおとなしいんだって。

A: I hear the Takahashi's boy Masao is visiting, but he's really quiet.

B: That's what I hear. He's almost hyperactive and troublesome at home, but in someone else's home, he's as shy and quiet as a borrowed cat.

Neko mo Shakushi mo

猫も杓子も

28.

“even cats and rice ladles”

(everybody and his/her mother [brother])

According to one folk etymology, the rice ladle symbolizes housewives; since cats and housewives are virtually universal to Japanese households, the expression means “everybody.” An opposite interpretation holds cats to be rare and rice ladles to be universal, so that the expression is all-inclusive of both rare and abundant items.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Saikin mata sukaato take ga sukoshi mijikaku natta yoo ne.

B: Soo na no yo. Korede mata, neko mo shakushi mo mijikai sukaato ni naru n desho. Kosei ga nakute iya ni naru wa ne, mattaku.

A: 最近まのスカートが少し短くなったようね。

B: そうなのよ。これで又、猫も杓子も短いスカートになるんでしょ。個性がなくていやになるわね、全く。

A: It seems skirt lengths have shortened recently.

B: You noticed, too? Now everybody and her mother will be wearing shorter skirts. There's absolutely no individual style—I hate it!

Neko ni Koban

猫に小判

"a gold coin before a cat"

(pearls before swine)

Koban is a small oval-shaped gold coin which circulated in Japan prior to the Meiji Restoration of 1868. The expression is used when suggesting that not everyone can appreciate an object to the same degree. Similar to "do not cast pearls before swine," it means "don't offer anything of value and merit to those who are incapable of appreciating it."

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Sasaki-san no tokoro ne, musukosan no tame ni gurando piano o katta n da tte. Demo musukosan wa angaku ni wa mattaku kyoomi ga nai mitai yo. Neko ni koban to wa ano koto ne.

A: 佐々木さんのところね、息子さんのためにグランドピアノを買ったんだって。でも、息子さんは音楽には全く興味がないみたいよ。猫に小判とはあのことね。

A: I hear that Sasaki bought a grand piano for his son, but the son isn't interested in music at all. That is truly a case of "pearls before swine," isn't it?

30.

Neko no Hitai

猫のひたい

30.

“cat’s forehead”

(extremely small in size)

Cats are not known to have high foreheads. The expression exaggerates the inadequacy of a space. Neko no hitai is often heard when prospective home buyers in Japan first see the size of their yard.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A—female, B—male)

A: Atarashii niwatsuki no uchi ni utsutta n desu ite?

B: Iya ne, niwa to ieru ka doo ka, honno neko no hitai no yoo na uraniwa ga tsuteru teido na n da

A: 新しい庭つきの家に移ったんですって?

B: いやね、庭と言えるかどうか、ほんの猫のひたいのような裏庭がついてる程度なんだ。

A: I hear you moved into a single family home with a yard.

B: Yeah, but I’m not sure you can call it a yard; it’s an extremely small backyard area.

Neko no Te mo Karitai

猫の手も借りたい

31.

“willing to accept even the helping hand of a cat”

(swamped, shorthanded, “up to one’s eyeballs” in work)

This phrase indicates an intense degree of need. Cats are useless when it comes to assisting people. If one will go so far as to accept even the help of a cat, one really is in desperate need.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Ano, chotto gomennasai. Koko no jimusho, kyoo, hikkoshi de, neko no te mo karitai yona isogashisa na no. Atode denwa suru wa

A: あの、ちょっとごめんなさい。ここの事務所、今日、引っ越しで、猫の手も借りたいような忙しさなの。あとで電話するわ。

A: Uh, sorry. You know at our office we’re in the middle of a move today and we’re swamped. I’ll call you later.

32.

Onaji Ana no Mujina

同じ穴のむじな

32.

“badgers from the same hole”

(co-conspirators, brothers in crime)

Japanese fairy tales characterize badgers as sometimes villainous and at other times comical cheaters who play tricks on people. This is based on the fact that badgers and raccoons steal harvested produce from farmers. The phrase suggests a gang/group of bad guys.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

- A: Murata-san no fusei ga hakkaku shite, onaji ka no Sakai-san mo ta.hen rashii yo.
 B: Iya, Sakai-san mo onaji ana no mujina janai ka. Murata-san hiton de anna fusei ga dekiru wake nai yo.
- A: 村田さんの不正が発覚して、同じ課の酒井さんも大変らしいよ。
 B: いや、酒井さんも同じ穴のむじなじゃないか。村田さんひとりであんな不正ができるわけないよ。
- A: Murata's illegal doings have been discovered and Sakai, who is in the same section, seems to be very concerned.
 B: But isn't Sakai a co-conspirator? Murata couldn't have done all that single-handedly, you know.

33.

Suzume no Namida

雀の涙

33.

“sparrow’s tears”

(very small amount, a tad)

The implication of this expression is “not enough” —one wishes it were more. If sparrows could cry, their tears would be tiny. Sparrows are commonly found throughout Japan and often represent ordinary people in Japanese folktales.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Kyuuryoo agatta n da ite?

B: Iya, honno sukoshi.

A: Sanna koto nai daroo

B: Agatta koto wa agatta kedo sa, honno suzume no namida de nee.

A: 給料上がったんだって？

B: いや、ほんの少し。

A: そんなことないだろう。

B: 上がったことは上がったけどさ、ほんの雀の涙でねえ。

A: I hear you got a pay raise. Is it true?

B: Well...just a little.

A: You expect me to believe that?

B: OK, I got a pay raise, but it's such a small amount.

Tatsu Tori Ato o Nigosazu

立つ鳥後を濁さず

34.

"Birds leave the water undisturbed."

(Leave on a good note; create a good impression when leaving for good.)

This is what we should remind people who are about to go into a nature preserve. Used most frequently in reference to one's place of work. Just as birds leave the water undisturbed, we should leave our current place of work undisturbed; i.e., in the best condition for one's replacement.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A = male, B = female)

A: Iyoiyo kaisha o yamete Nyuu Yooku e iku n da tte ne.

B: Ea. Sorede ima tottemo isogashii no yo. Iroi seiri shite okanakereba naranai koto ga takusan atte. Soreni "tatsu tori ato o nigosazu" da kara.

A: いよいよ会社を辞めてニューヨークへ行くんだってね。

B: ええ。それで今とっても忙しいのよ。いろいろ整理しておかなければならないことがたくさんあって。それに「立つ鳥後を濁さず」だから。

A: I hear you're quitting the company and going to New York soon.

B: That's right. So I'm really busy now. There are so many things I need to organize and put away. Besides, as the saying goes, "Birds leave the water undisturbed."

35.

Tsuru no Hitokoe

鶴の一声

36.

“the cry of the crane”

(voice of authority, unchallengeable order)

According to Japanese folklore, cranes live for a thousand years. It seems that old, white-haired village leaders live nearly as long. As the respected authority, the “wise old bird” is able to mobilize the village. Thus, a powerful voice from the acknowledged leader (regardless of age) is tsuru no hitokoe.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Kyoo no kaigi wa zuibun shussekiritsu ga ii nee.

B: Sasaki-san shitteru doro? Kanojo no tsuru no hitokoe de isogashii noni minna atsumatta n da yo.

A: 今日の会議は随分出席率がいいねえ。

B: 佐々木さん知ってるだろ？彼女の鶴の一声で忙しいのにみんな集まったんだよ。

A: Attendance at today's meeting was terrific, wasn't it?

B: You know Ms. Sasaki, don't you? It's her voice of authority that got everyone to attend.

Uma no Hone

馬の骨

36.

"the bones of a horse"

(an unknown person with no references, a person of unknown background)

Imagine the skeleton of a horse half buried in the sand. Who knows who the horse was? What of the horse's master? Nobody knows. That's the feeling behind the expression when applied to a newcomer in the tight-knit Japanese society. Uma no hone carries a heavy negative connotation when referring to an outsider.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal/female)

A: Kekkon mae no musume ga doko no uma no hone da ka wakaranai yonna otoko to tsukiatte wa ikemasen yo.

A: 結婚前の娘がどここの馬の骨だか分からないような男とつきあってはいけませんよ。

A: Before marriage a girl should not go out with a man of unknown background.

37.

Gomame no Hagishiri

ごまめの歯ざしり

37.

"little fish grinding their teeth"

(of no consequence, powerless)

If sharks were to grind their teeth, it might be a big deal. Shock waves would radiate in all directions. But a bunch of little fish furiously grinding their teeth is of no consequence. Who would know? Who would care?

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Kannendo no shinnyuu buin wa monku bakari itteru ne.

B: Ki ni shinai, ki ni shinai. Doose gomame no hagishiri na n da kara, ima made doori ni yatte ikeba ii sa.

A: 今年度の新入部員は文句ばかり言ってるね。

B: 気にしない、気にしない。どうせごまめの歯ざしりなんだから、今まで通りにやっていけばいいさ。

A: This year's new club members do nothing but complain.

B: Don't worry, don't worry. What they say is of no consequence anyway. We'll just carry on as we always have.

Hachi no Su o Tsutsuita Yoo

蜂の巣をつついたよう

38.

“like poking a beehive”

(bedlam, chaotic, frenzied)

The impression is that of a swarm of noisy bees buzzing around in a frenzy of confusion. Complete bedlam that one is not happy about.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Nigakki no hajime. Sensei ga kuru mae, kodomo tachi wa natsuyasumi no hanashi ya shukudai no koto nado, waiwai gayagaya. Marude hachi no su o tsutsuita yoono sawagashisa da.

学期のはじめ。先生が来る前、子供達は夏休みの話や宿題のことなど、ワイワイガヤガヤ。まるで蜂の巣をつついたような騒がしさだ。

The beginning of the second semester. Before the teacher shows up, the children are chatting about their summer vacations and about their assignments. It's chaotic.

39.

Hippari Dako

ひっぱりダコ

39.

“a spread-eagled octopus”

(Mr./Mrs./Ms. Popularity, a person in great demand, being pulled in all directions)

This expression originates from the way an octopus is stretched out to dry. All eight legs are spread out and stretched to their limits. Thus, when the pretty young starlet or the renowned architect is suddenly in great demand, the impression is like a hippari dako.

Sample text:

(Style: A—informal/male, B—formal/male)

A: Ano shinjin kashu, saikin zuibun ninki ga dete kita ne.

B: Soo na n desu ya. Moo iroirona tokoro kara hippari dako de ne. Uchi no zasshi no intabyuu toru no mo taihenna kurai na n desu ya.

A: あの新人歌手、最近ずいぶん人気が出てきたね。

B: そうなんです。もういろいろなところからひっぱりダコでね。うちの雑誌のインタビューとるのも大変なくらいなんです。

A: That new singer is really getting popular.

B: She sure is! She's in great demand; actually it was difficult booking her for our magazine interview.

40.

I no Naka no Kawazu [Taikai o Shirazu]

井の中の蛙 [大海を知らず]

40.

"A frog in the well [doesn't know the sea]."

(a provincial, one who has never seen the world)

Used to advocate greater travel beyond the Japanese islands, it captures the Japanese sense of awareness of being like a frog in a well. Comfortable as the well may be, it is but a small part of the whole world. Japanese teachers often recite this proverb to encourage their students to progress beyond the circumstances into which they were born.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Ningen wa dare demo onaji basho ni nagaku sumu to, i no naka no kawazu ni naru. Dakara tokidoki jibun no sodatta kankyoo, jibun no sumi nareta sekai to chigau soto no ookina sekai ni mo, jibun jishin o oite miru koto ga taisetsu dearu.

人間は誰でも同じ場所、長く住むと、井の中の蛙になる。だから時々自分の育った環境、自分の住み慣れた世界と違う外の大きな世界にも、自分自身を置いてみる事が大切である。

When a person remains in the same location for many years, he or she becomes a frog in the well. So it is important sometimes to place ourselves in the wide world outside of the environment where we grew up or the narrow world we have grown accustomed to.

41.

Ka no Naku Yoona Koe

蚊のなくような声

41.

“a voice like the cry of a mosquito”

(a faint, almost inaudible voice)

Like a mosquito that buzzes in and out of your range, the person's voice is faint and hard to hear.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal/female)

A: Sonna ka no naku yoona koe de wa minna ni kikaemasen ya. Motta ookina koe de moo ichido itte minasai.

A: そんな蚊のなくような声ではみんなに聞こえませんよ。
もっと大きな声でもう一度言ってみなさい。

A: Nobody can hear your faint voice. Try saying it again, only louder.

42.

Manaita no Ue no Koi

まな板の上の鯉

42.

"carp on the cutting board"

(doomed, in the hands of God, at the mercy of fate)

This fatalistic expression is used when one feels helpless to control one's immediate destiny. The foreboding overtone comes from the knowledge of what inevitably befalls a fish laid out on a cutting board.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B= male)

A: Murata-san ne, shakkin ga kasanatte toosan sunzen na n da tte. Ata wa ginkoo no dekata shidai to yuu koto rashii wa.

B: Soreja marukkan manaita no ue no koi janai ka. Shinseki ka shinai no tsute de doonika naranaï no ka ne.

A: 村田さんね、借金がかさなって倒産寸前なんだって。あとは銀行の出方次第ということらしいわ。

B: それじゃまるっきりまな板の上の鯉じゃないか。親戚が知合いのつてでどうにかならないのかね。

A: I hear that Mr. Murata is in great debt and is on the verge of bankruptcy. It all seems to depend on the bank now.

B: He's doomed then. Can't his relatives and friends do something about it?

Mushi no Iki

虫の息

43.

“the breath of an insect”

(near one's death, almost dead)

Since insects are small, imagine how faint their breath must be. The chances of recovery are extremely slim for a man whose breath is as faint as that of an insect.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal/female)

A: Tanaka-san no aniisan, mottaku kinodokuni nee.
Kootsuu jiko de nakunatta n desu tte ne.

B: Ee, soo na n desu tte. Ookina jiko de ne, byooin ni tsuita toki wa moo mushi no iki datta rashii n desu yo.

A: 田中さんのお兄さん、全く気の毒にねえ。交通事故で亡くなったんですってね。

B: ええ、そうなんですって。大きな事故でね、病院に着いた時はもう虫の息だったらしいんですよ。

A: Tanaka's brother, what a tragedy! I hear he was killed in a traffic accident.

B: Yes, that's what I heard, too. It was a pretty serious accident. It seems he was almost dead by the time he arrived at the hospital.

Nakitsura ni Hachi

泣き面に蜂

44.

"The bee [stings] when you're already crying."

(When it rains, it pours; bad things come in threes.)

When someone has been hit simultaneously with several bad breaks, it may be consoling to hear a friend say, "Nakitsura ni hachi." The philosophical surety of the phrase reminds Japanese that misfortune may indeed come in twos (or even threes).

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Yukari wa kuno sensei ni shikararete nakinagara kaette kuru tochiu, Masao-kun ni nagurareta rashii n da. Mattaku nakitsura ni hachi to wa kono koto da na.

A: ゆかりはきのう先生にしかられて泣きながら帰ってくる途中、正夫君になぐられたらしいんだ。全く泣き面に蜂とはこのことだな。

A: Yesterday, apparently, Yukari's teacher scolded her, and then as she was crying on her way home, Masao beat her up. It's really true: "When it rains, it pours." 45.

Saba o Yomu

さばを読む

45.

"to read the mackerel"

(to manipulate the figures to one's advantage, to offer false numbers intentionally, to inflate or deflate figures)

Among fish caught in nets, mackerel are so little valued that Japanese fishermen may not bother to count them. Often the rough estimates of mackerel have been highly inflated, giving rise to the use of the phrase "reading the mackerel" to indicate the practice of "guesstimating" in one's own favor.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B=male)

A: Kono kaikei, zuibun takai to omowanai? Nomimono yonjuuhachinin bun hie aru kedo.

B: Kanari saba o yonderu n janai ka Kaisha barai da kara wakaranai to omotteiru n daroo.

A: この会計、ずいぶん高いと思わない？ 飲みもの四十八人分ってあるけど。

B: かなりさばを読んでるんじゃないか。会社払いだからわからないと思っているんだろう。

A: Don't you think this bill is awfully high? They list 48 drinks!

B: They must be inflating the figures. They probably figure nobody will catch it since the company's paying for it.

Tade Kuu Mushi mo Sukizuki

たで食う虫も好き好き

46.

"Some bugs prefer bitters."

(There is no accounting for tastes; some prefer nettles.)

This Japanese proverb acknowledges the reality that people have different tastes. Also used to warn people not to judge others by one's own taste. Tade is smartweed, a bitter tasting plant. Yet some insects prefer it.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=male, B=female)

A: Aitsu naze anna ii okusan to wakarete, mata henna onna to saikon shita n daroo.

B: Datte "tade kuu mushi mo sukizuki" ite yuu deshaa.

A: あいつなぜあんないい奥さんと別れて、又変な女と再婚したんだろう。

B: だって、「たで食う虫も好き好き」って言うでしょう。

A: Why did he divorce such a good woman and remarry such a weirdo?

B: Oh well, you know, there's no accounting for tastes.

Section Three

The Human Body

47.

Abata mo Ekubo

あばたもえくぼ

47.

“Pockmarks are [seen as] dimples.”

(Love is blind.)

Abata mo ekubo is another way of saying, “Beauty is in the eye of the beholder.” But in this Japanese expression, the beholder is almost always a man who is beholding a woman. Her face may not have physical beauty, but her personality makes her attractive to him.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Akio-kun ne, kan'yaku shita n da tte

B: Hee, doko no ojaasan to? Kireina hito?

A: Kirei to yuu wake demo nai kedo, kawaii ko yo. Soreni sukin nareba abata mo ekubo da kara ne

A: 昭男君ね、婚約したんだって、

B: へえ、どこのお嬢さんと？ きれいな人？

A: きれいと言うわけでもないけど、かわいい子よ。それに好きになればあばたもえくぼだからね。

A: You know Akio—I hear he got engaged.

B: Really? With whom? Is she pretty?

A: I wouldn't call her pretty, but she's cute. Besides, you know love is blind.

Agura o Kaku

あぐらをかく

48.

“to sit crosslegged”

(to rest on one's laurels, to coast, to be complacent)

Sitting on the edge of one's chair with both feet firmly planted on the ground shows eagerness, enthusiasm, and a spirit of trying hard to succeed. In contrast, a relaxed pose of sitting on a cushion with one's legs crossed means to coast, to rest on one's laurels.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Dooze moo tairitsu suru aite wa inai daroo to omotte, itsumade mo shachoo no za ni agura o kaite irareru to omoitara oomachigai da

A: どうせもう対立する相手はいないだろうと思って、いつまでも社長の座にあぐらをかいていられると思ったら大間違いだ。

A: You think you have no competitors; but it's a mistake to believe that you can sit forever in the company's president's position and rest on your laurels.

Ashimoto o Miru

足もとを見る

“to look at someone’s feet”

(to exploit someone's weakness in negotiation, to charge what the traffic will bear)

According to Japanese etymological sources, ashimoto o miru comes from the Feudal Age when the palanquin carriers would examine the legs and feet of prospective customers to judge their level of exhaustion, then raise the fare accordingly.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/mole)

A: Kinoo wa taihen datta yo. Nakagawa to niji made nonjatte sa. Kaeri no takushii ne, ashimoto o mirarechatte, takushidai, zuibun torareta n da.

A: きのは大変だったよ。中川と二時まで飲んじゃってさ。帰りのタクシーね、足もとを見られちゃって、タクシー代、随分とられたんだ。

A: Last night was a disaster. I ended up drinking with Nakagawa until two in the morning. And of course, the taxi driver took advantage of my condition and overcharged me like crazy.

Ashi o Arau

足を洗う

50.

"to wash one's feet"

(to start over [after discarding a bad situation], to go straight)

Menial, less prestigious jobs often require working outdoors and sometimes even working barefooted. So to wash one's feet figuratively means to give up a lowly job or to rise up from a morally wrong way of life (crime)

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Ichido furyoo nakama ni hattara, nakanaka nuke dasenai mono da. Yakuza no sekai to onaji de, aru shuudan ni nakamairi shite shimau to ningen wa kontanni wa ashi o araenai mono dearu.

一度不良仲間に入ったら、なかなか抜け出せないものだ、やぐざの世界と同じで、ある集団に仲間入りしてしまうと人間は簡単には足を洗えないものである。

When a man becomes a member of a gang, it's very difficult to break away from it. As in the case of the world of yakuza [Japanese organized crime], once you're a part of it, it is not an easy thing to go straight.

Atama ga Sagaru

頭が下がる

51.

“One’s head is bowed.”

(to take off one’s hat to another, to acknowledge the exceptional effort of others)

When moved by another’s extraordinary effort, one’s head, voluntarily or involuntarily lowers in respect. Such is the reaction depicted by atama ga sagaru.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Hontooni ano hito no doryoku o miru to, atama ga sagaru omae ga suru wa.

B: Dare no koto?

A: Hora, itsumo toshokan de benkyoo shiteiru wakai hito, Maeda-san ite yuu n janakatta?

A: 本当にあの人の努力を見ると、頭が下がる思いがするわ。

B: 誰のこと?

A: ほら、いつも図書館で勉強している若い人、前田さんって言うんじゃないか?

A: Watching that guy work, I really have to take off my hat to him!

B: What guy?

A: You know, that young guy who’s always studying in the library. Wasn’t his name Maeda?

52.

Awaseru Kao ga Nai

合わせる顔がない

52.

“having no face to face someone”

(to be ashamed, not knowing how to face someone)

This idiom captures the deep concern Japanese have for maintaining face. “Face,” of course, means one’s positive image, one’s public identity and correct behavior within the community. The “having no face” part of the expression can be interpreted as “not knowing what expression to wear,” or “not knowing even how to compose one’s expression” when having to face someone at a time when one feels deeply ashamed.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal)

A: Sumimasen. Konkai no purojekuto ga umaku ikanakatta no wa zenbu watashi no fuchui ni yoru mono desu. Mattaku awaseru kao ga arimasen.

A: すみません。今回のプロジェクトがうまくいかなかったのは全部私の不注意によるものです。全く合わせる顔がありません。

A: I’m sorry. It was due to my carelessness that the project didn’t go well. I have no idea how to face you...

53.

Haragei

腹芸

53.

"belly performance"

(intuitive decision making, going on a gut feeling, negotiating without the use of direct words)

The origin of the word haragei is a drama performed on the belly of a person lying down, or a skit performed with a face painted on one's belly. From this comes the meaning of a theatrical strategy to communicate to others without words. Today haragei is thought of as a nonverbal, intuitive problem-solving technique requiring experience, sensitivity, and a keen knowledge of others.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Kondo no chiji wa oomono da nee. Hito o ugokasu sakajikara ga aru yoo da.

B: Soo rashii. Nanishiro haragei ni taketa hito da tte yuu uwasa ga aru kurai da kora.

A: 今度の知事は人物だねえ。人を動かす底力があるようだ。

B: そうらしい。何しろ腹芸にたけた人だっていううわさがあるくらいだから。

A: Our new governor is a real "Mover and Shaker." He seems to have a knack for mobilizing people into action.

B: That's what I hear, too. People say it's because his intuitive negotiating technique is very effective.

Ishin Denshin

以心伝心

54.

“reading each other’s heart”

(reading each other’s heart or mind; wordless, yet deep understanding between two [close] people)

Wordless yet total communication between two people, as if one heart is in direct contact with the other. Couples who have been married for 50 years may have ishin denshin. Co-workers, business associates, and friends are also capable of this harmonious relationship.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B= male)

A: Keiyakusho o kawashite konakatta no?

B: Ii n da yo. Soo nanimo kama bunsho ni shinakute mo.
Aitsu to ore to wa, nagai aida no tsukiai de ishin denshin da kara ne.

A. 契約書を交わしてこなかったの？

B. いいんだよ。そう何もかも文書にしなくても。あいつと
れとは、長い間のつきあいで以心伝心だからね。

A: Didn't you two sign a contract?

B: It's OK. We don't need to put everything down in words. He and I have been friends for a long time; we read each other's mind.

55.

Kao ga Hiroi

顔が広い

55.

"wide-faced"

(to be widely known, to have a large circle of acquaintances, to have many contacts)

To be established in business or to be respected in society, it is important to be kao ga hiroi. The kao ga hiroi person is often the community leader or the authority figure in the profession. He or she has many contacts in the community and is expected to perform a paternal or maternal role.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B=male)

A: Sachiko-san mata omiai na n desu te.

B: Tsugi kara tsugi e to yoku miai banashi ga hairu nee.

A: Otoosan ga kao ga hiroi kara iroirona tokoro kara hanashi ga aru n deshoo.

A: やっぱりまたお見合いなんですって。

B: 次から次へとよく見合い話はいるねえ。

A: お父さんが顔が広いからいろいろなところから話があるんでしょう。

A: Sachiko has another *omiai, right?

B: She sure gets those miai requests one after another, doesn't she?

A: Everybody knows her father, so omiai requests must come in from everywhere.

*(O)miai refers to an arranged meeting with a potential marriage partner.

56.

Katami ga Semai

肩身がせまい

56.

“narrow shoulders”

(a feeling of inferiority or inadequacy)

When in the presence of others who are superior in some respect, one's feelings of inferiority may be intensified. The physical manifestation of this feeling is a shrinking into oneself. The Japanese picture this reaction as a drawing in of the shoulders.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: *Ano partii wa gokusha to chishikijin no atsumari de ne
Watashi no yaoni gakureki no nai mono ni wa chotto katami ga semai yo.*

A: あのパーティーは学者と知識人の集まりだね。私のように
学歴のない者にはちょっと肩身がせまいよ。

A: The people at that party were mostly scholars and intellectuals. A person like me, who doesn't have an educational background feels kind of inadequate.

57.

Koshi ga Hikui

腰が低い

57.

“low-waisted”

(very polite, modest or humble)

It's probably fair to say that Japanese are preoccupied with hierarchies. Status is indicated physically by one's posture in relation to others. To bend a little, to lower one's head, or to bow a deep bow is to position oneself vis-à-vis a person of higher rank. Thus, koshi ga hikui is a compliment—especially to one who, by virtue of wealth or fame, has attained high status.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A. Tanaka shachoo, daigaisha no shachoo da kedo chittomo ibaru koto ga nai n da na. Koshi ga hikukute sa. Dakara minna ni sukareru n daroo na.

A: 田中社長、大会社の社長だけどちっともいばることがないんだな。腰が低くてさ。だからみんなに好かれるんだろうな。

A: President Tanaka. You know, even though he's the president of a big company, he never puts on airs. He's always modest. That's why he is liked by everyone.

58.

Mimi ga Itai

耳が痛い

58.

"My ears hurt."

(an acknowledgment that someone's criticism of oneself is correct; an indication of a prick of conscience, as if saying "you found me out.")

Some say that, despite Japan's economic might, its people are pretty simple. To say "my ears hurt," when words of criticism are hurled one's way, is direct and disarming. It's a way of saying "you got me." Implicit in the phrase is the recognition of wrongdoing.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Isogashii, isogashii tte inagara, muda banashi bakari shiteiru kara shigoto ga zenzen susumanai na da yo.

B: Iyaa, sono toori Mimi ga itai na

A: 忙しい、忙しいって言いながら、無駄話ばかりしているから仕事が全然進まないんだよ。

B: いやあ、その通り。耳が痛いな。

A: You say you're busy, but you waste your time chit-chatting. That's why you can't get your work done.

B: You're right You got me!

59.

Ryooyaku Kuchi ni Nigashi

良薬口に苦し

59.

"Good medicine tastes bitter in the mouth."

(Good advice is often unpleasant and difficult to accept.)

Teaches that one cannot expect to hear only good news in life. Sometimes, although painful, it is good medicine to taste the bitter truth. It is implicit in the statement that the speaker "cares enough" to speak with unusual candor.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

- A: Itsumo kachoo kara komakaku chuui soreru no ga tamaran yo.
 B: "Ryooyaku kuchi ni nigashi" tte yuu janai ka, ima wa nigai to omotte mo atode yokatta to kitto omou yo.

- A: いつも課長から細かく注意されるのがたまらんよ。
 B: 「良薬口に苦し」ってばうじゃないか。今はにがいと思ってもあとで良かったとさっと思うよ。

- A: I can't stand being constantly corrected in detail by the manager
 B: You know, they say, "Good medicine tastes bitter in the mouth." You may think these detailed corrections are unpleasant now but later on you'll realize their benefit.

60.

Shinzoo ga Tsuyoi

心臓が強い

60.

“strong-hearted”

(having nerve or gall, impervious to subtleties)

Shinzoo ga tsuyoi describes a socially bold, cheeky person. Usually considered a negative trait, the phrase also may refer to having the courage (or gall) to behave against what is normally expected, like an employee who questions his boss, or a student who challenges the teacher.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A = female, B = male)

A: Sachiko-san, daijobu kashira. Minna o daihyoo shite fuhei o ni itta kedo.

B: Kanojo nara daijobu sa. Shinzoo ga tsuyoi kara hakkiri monku ieru daro.

A: 佐知子さん、大丈夫かしら。みんなを代表して不平を言いに行ったけど。

B: 彼女なら大丈夫さ。心臓が強いからはっきり文句言えるだろ。

A: I wonder if Sachiko is OK. She went to register a complaint on behalf of the group.

B: She'll be fine. She has a lot of nerve; she'll tell them exactly what they did wrong.

Shiroi Me de Miru

白い目で見える

61.

“to look at someone with white eyes”

(to look coldly upon, to cast an unwelcoming glance)

This expression means to treat someone with disdain bordering on contempt. This is an especially appropriate phrase when the person is outside of one's group. Why shiroi (white) eyes? One theory is that eyes without pupils would have a cold, ghostly look analogous to a scornful rebuke.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Kondo hikkoshite kita Inoue-san ne. Ano hito wa honto no okusan janakute, aijin na n datte. Sore ga shirete kara mawari no shufu wa minna shiroi me de mihajimeta yoo yo.

A: 今度引っ越してきた井上さんね。あの人はほんとの奥さんじゃなくて、愛人なんだって。それが知れてからまわりの主婦はみんな白い目で見はじめたようよ。

A: You know the Inoues who just moved in? I hear Mrs. Inoue is not the wife, but a mistress. Once the news spread, housewives in the neighborhood began to look at her coldly.

Tsura no Kawa ga Atsui

面の皮が厚い

"The skin on one's face is thick."

(uncommonly rude, having too much nerve, inconsiderate by nature)

The ideal face in Japan figuratively has a thin layer of skin so as to respond with sensitivity to others. In contrast, a thick-skinned, un-Japanese face reflects an inability to blush (to show shame), to reveal vulnerability, or to show empathy.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Murai-san ne, jibun ga wasureta noni, zenzen hansei shinai no ya. Sono kuse haka no wasureta hito ni monku iteru no.

B: Saayuu no wa tsura no kawa ga atsui tte yuu no yo. Futsuu no hito nara sonna koto zettai dekinai to omou wa

A: 村井さんね、自分が忘れたのに、ぜんぜん反省しないのよ。そのくせ他の忘れた人に文句言ってるの。

B: そういふのは面の皮が厚いって言うのよ。普通の人ならそんなこと絶対できないと思うわ。

A: You know Ms. Murai, she herself forgot, but she wouldn't think of apologizing! Instead, she criticizes everybody else who forgot.

B: That's what I call being uncommonly rude. A normal person could never do such a thing!

63.

Ude o Migaku

腕をみがく

63.

“to polish one’s arms”

(to work at mastering one’s craft, to improve and cultivate one’s skill)

Ude o migaku is most often used in advice to the young, warning them constantly to improve their skills. In Japan discipline and training are considered essential to success in any field.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal/male)

A: Wakai uchi ni isshookenmei ude o migaite akanai to shoarai kamarimasu yo.

B: Isshookenmei yatteru n desu kedo, nakanaka omou yooni dekinakute.

A: 若いうちに一生懸命腕をみがいておかないと将来困りますよ。

B: 一生懸命やってるんですけど、なかなか思うようにできなくて。

A: You’ll be in trouble later on if you don’t work at mastering your craft while you are young.

B: I’m doing my best, but I don’t seem to be able to achieve what I want.

Ushirogami o Hikareru Omoi

後ろ髪を引かれる思い

64.

"a feeling as if one's hair is being pulled back"

(a feeling of much reluctance, a feeling of leaving one's heart behind)

A deep feeling of guilt for discarding one option in life in favor of another. Japanese feel a lingering tug of loyalty toward the discarded option. The tug, however, is not at the heart strings but at the hairs at the back of the head.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Ima kara sannen mae, tashiaita fubo o nokoshite Tookyoo ni dete kita. Sono toki no ushirogami o hikareru omoi wa ima mo wasurerarenai.

今から三年前、年老いた父母を残して東京に出てきた。その時の後ろ髪を引かれる思いは今も忘れられない

Three years ago, I left my aged parents and moved to Tokyo. I still can't forget that strong feeling of reluctance I felt then.

65.

Ushiroyubi o Sasareru Yoo

後ろ指をさされるよう

65.

“like having a finger pointed at one’s back”

(being the object of social contempt, scorn, and criticism)

Social control through shame is highly developed in Japan. Japanese are keenly sensitive to being the object of scorn or ostracism. This expression conveys the feeling that everyone is pointing an accusatory finger at one’s back for one’s shameful conduct.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A—female, B= male)

A: Hamada-san ne, kaisha ni uso itte katteni ryokoo shita n da tte. Watashi mo yatte miyoo ka na.

B: Iya, hito ni ushiroyubi o sasareru yoona kato wa shinai hao ga ii yo. Kitto ato de kookai suru kara

A: 浜田さんね、会社にうそ言って勝手に旅行したんたって。私もやってみようかな。

B: いや、人に後ろ指をさされるようなことはしない方がいいよ。きっとあとで後悔するから。

A: You know Ms. Hamada. She lied to the company and went off on a vacation. I’m thinking about doing something like that myself

B: You really shouldn’t do something you’ll be socially criticized for. You’ll regret it later, I’m sure.

Section Four

From One to Ten and More

66.

Chiri mo Tsumoreba Yama to Naru

ちりも積もれば山となる

66.

"piled-up specks of dust become a mountain."

(Little things add up; "Mountains are made from grains of sand." Small efforts, when accumulated, bring great success.)

This expression teaches the moral that, little by little and bit by bit, one's persistent efforts will lead to achievement. Even the smallest of efforts, however trivial they may seem at the time, will contribute toward one's ultimate success.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A = male, B = female)

A: Okane sanna sukoshi zutsu no chokin ja, nakanaka tamarana ne

B: Demo "chiri mo tsumoreba yama to naru" tte yuu desho.

A: お金そんな少しずつの貯金じゃ、なかなかたまらないね

B: でも、「ちりも積もれば山となる」って言うでしょ。

A: What good is it going to do me to put aside so little savings each time?

B: But remember the saying, "Mountains are made from grains of sand."

67.

Happoo Bijin

八方美人

67.

“a beauty in eight directions”

(one who tries to please everyone, one who seeks popularity at the expense of integrity)

Happoo means eight directions. Bijin literally means a beautiful woman. A person who wants to look attractive in eight different directions is a person trying too hard to please everyone, thus revealing a lack of integrity.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual (blunt)/male)

A: Akio no yatsu, kyaaryoku shite kureru tte. Saisho wa iya da tte ita n da kedo sa.

B: Iya, aitsu wa happoo bijin da karo, ate ni naranai yo.

A: 昭男のやつ、協力してくれるって。最初はいやだって言ったんだけどさ

B: いや、あいつは八方美人だから、あてにならないよ。

A: Akio says he'll help us. He said he didn't want to at first, though.

B: Well, he's the type who tries to please everyone, so you really can't count on him.

Hito Hata Ageru

ひと旗あげる

68.

"to hoist one's own flag"

(to succeed in business, particularly one's own enterprise)

In feudal times, conquering warriors would raise the flag of their lord on the battle site. Raising the flag in Japan today still symbolizes victory, particularly in reference to independent entrepreneurs who succeed in business after starting from scratch.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B=male)

- A: Kawakami-san no musukosan, kondo jigyou o hajimeru n desu te
 B: Hoo, sorya taihen daroo na. Kono keiki ja, hitohata ageru no mo muzukashiku naru ippoo daroo kara naa.

- A: 川上さんの息子さん、今度事業をはじめますって。
 B: ほう、そりゃ大変だろうな。この景気じゃ、ひと旗あげるのもむずかしくなる一方だろうからなあ。

- A: Did you know that Mr. Kawakami's son is launching a new business?
 B: Is that right? It's going to be an uphill climb. To succeed in your own enterprise in today's business climate is getting harder and harder.

Hitori Zumoo o Toru

ひとり相撲を取る

69.

"to wrestle a one-man sumo"

(to try hard at something without the support of others)

Obviously it takes two wrestlers to participate in a sumo match. However enthusiastically one may wrestle with oneself, the action itself will be incomplete. Therein lies the off-on-one's-own (on a tangent) meaning of hitori zumoo.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Rei no an, iinkai de teian shita n daroo?

B: Iya, sore ga ne, teian shita koto wa shita kedo hitori zumoo o toita kanji de dare mo shiji shite kurenakatta n da.

A: 例の案、委員会で提案したんだろう?

B: いや、それがね、提案したことはしたけどひとり相撲を取った感じで誰も支持してくれなかったんだ。

A: You proposed that plan at the committee meeting, didn't you?

B: Yeah, I did. I proposed it, but it was like wrestling a one-man sumo. No one supported it.

70.

Ishi no Ue ni mo Sannen

石の上にも三年

70.

“sitting on a stone for three years”

(perseverance wins in the end; endurance is a virtue.)

Japanese consider it a virtue to out-sit the competition. The common practice of making an investment, even at a loss, with the belief that a return will come in the long run comes from this simple, down-to-earth philosophy. Sitting on a rock for three years requires outrageous tenacity, but the longer you sit, the more secure you are in your position. And more to the point, you become the master of the situation because you have stuck with it. In fact, the cold “stone” may even seem warm and comfortable after three long years.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B= male)

- A: Konna chiisana mise ja nakanaka okyakusan kisooni naishi, yappari dame kashira.
 B: Sonna koto nai ya. Moo chotto jikan ga hitsuyoana n da ya. “Ishi no ue ni mo sannen” te yuu daroo.
- A: こんな小さな店じゃなかなかお客さん来そうにないし、やっぱりだめかしら。
 B: そんなことないよ。もうちょっと時間が必要なんだよ。「石の上にも三年」って言うだろう。
- A: Customers just aren't coming to this small a shop. It may not work after all.
 B: Nonsense. Give it time. You know what they say: “Perseverance wins in the end.”

71.

Juunin Toiro

十人十色

71.

"ten people, ten colors"

(different strokes for different folks; everyone has his or her own taste; "to each his own")

Even though there is a large measure of truth to the widespread belief that Japanese conform to the group, this often heard phrase attests to their awareness of the differences in individual tastes.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A=female, B= male)

A: Kondo no partii no ryoon wa nani o tanonda no?

B: Nanika ii mono to itte mo juunin toiro dakara, nakanaka kimeranakute ne. De, kekkyoku irairo torimazete tanomu koto ni shita n da yo.

A: 今度のパーティーの料理は何をたのんだの?

B: 何かいいものと言っても十人十色だから、なかなか決まらなくてね。で、結局いろいろとりまぜてたのむことにしたんだよ。

A: What kind of food did you order for the party?

B: Since everybody has his or her own taste, we had a hard time deciding, but we finally came up with a menu that offers a lot of variety

Nimaijita o Tsukau

二枚舌を使う

"to use two tongues"

(to speak from both sides of the mouth, to speak with a forked tongue)

This expression refers to the practice of "speaking out of both sides of the mouth"—shading the meaning of one's words to appeal to a particular person or group, while purposely giving a different impression to others. In Japan, as elsewhere, this practice (though common) is considered duplicitous and hypocritical.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A= male, B=female)

- A: Iyaa, chigau naa. Kono aida no kaigi de wa sonna koto wa ittenakatta naa.
 B: Soo kashira. Kyoo no ohanashi o sono mama tsutaetai dake da kedo.
 A: Saikin, Mari-san nimaijita o tsukau yooni natte kita ne. Hanashi ga dondon kawaru n da kara tamanna! yo.
 A: いやあ、ちがうなあ。この間の会議ではそんなことは言ってなかったなあ。
 B: そうかしら。今日のお話をそのまま伝えたただけけど。
 A: 最近、森さん二枚舌を使うようになってきたね。話がどんどん変わるんだからたまらないよ。
 A: No, that's not it. He didn't say that in the meeting the other day.
 B: Really? I'm just reporting to you what he said to me today.
 A: Mon has recently gotten into this habit of speaking from both sides of the mouth. His story changes from minute to minute; I can't stand it!

73.

Ni no Ashi o Fumu

二の足を踏む

73.

“to step twice in the same spot”

(to hesitate, to have second thoughts before taking an action)

To step twice in the same place is not to advance forward. Thus the meaning of hesitation before continuing on a presumed or planned course of action.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Sasuga puro sukiiyaa no Hayashi-shi mo, sono yama no minami shamen o mite ni no ashi o funda. Totemo nami no sukiiyaa de wa suberesoomo nai kyukooka ga, haruka kanata no tani made tsuzuiteiru no dearu

さすがプロ・スキーヤーの林氏も、その山の南斜面を見て二の足を踏んだ。とても此のスキーヤーではすべれそうもない急降下が、はるかかなたの谷まで続いているのである。

Even Hayashi, a professional skier, hesitated when he faced the southern slope of the mountain. The nose-diving slope continued all the way down into the valley. The average skier wouldn't even think about trying it.

Onna Sannin
Yoreba
Kashimashii

74.

女三人寄れば姦しい

“Where three women gather, there is a noisy clamor.”

74.

(Women tend to talk a lot.)

The Chinese character for kashimashii (“clamorous”) is made up of three small characters for “woman.” In Japan it is understood that when two women get together, they tend to talk a lot. When three get together, it becomes really noisy.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Tonari no heya, taihenna sawagashisa da.

B: Sarya soo daroo. “Onna sannin yoreba kashimashii” te yuu nani, gonin atsumatte shabetteru n da kara ne.

A: 隣の部屋、大変な騒がしさだ。

B: そりゃ、そうだろう。『女三人寄れば姦しい』って言うのに、五人集まってしゃべってるんだからね。

A: Such a racket they're making next door!

B: What do you expect? If it's true that when three women gather there is a noisy clamor, now you know what it sounds like when five of them get together

Sannin Yoreba Monju no Chie

三人寄れば文珠の知恵

75.

“Three people together have the wisdom of a Buddha.”

(two heads are better than one)

Monju is the Saint of Wisdom in the Buddhist faith. Similar to “two heads are better than one,” the Japanese proverb suggests that even average people, when working in a group, can come up with a great idea.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A—female, B—male)

A: Kaigishitsu de nanika hisohiso hanashiteru kedo, nani shiteru na?

B: Kondo no purojekuto no gen'an o netteru rashii yo.

A: Daijoubu kashira. Demo, maa “sannin yoreba Monju no chie” te yuu kara

A: 会議室で何かひそひそ話してるけど、何してるの?

B: こんどのプロジェクトの原案を練ってるらしいよ。

A: 大丈夫かしら。でも、まあ「二人寄れば文珠の知恵」って言うから…。

A: They're whispering among themselves in the meeting room; what are they up to?

B: They seem to be brainstorming on a new project.

A: Do you really think they can do it? Oh well, they say, “Two heads are better than one.”

Sushizume

すし詰め

76.

"packed like sushi"

(very crowded, jam-packed)

This expression is similar in meaning to "packed like sardines." Sushi, the combination of raw fish with vinegared rice, is popular in Japan and increasingly so in the United States and Europe. Take-out sushi is often bought in little boxes called sushi-on, in which the sushi pieces are packed tightly

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Atarashii shigoto, tanoshii kedo, tsuukin ga taihen de ne. Marasa sushizume no densha de ichijikan na n da yo.

B: Taihen da ne.

A: 新しい仕事、楽しいけど、通勤が大変だね。毎朝すし詰め
の電車で 時間なんだよ。

B: 大変だね。

A: My new job is a lot of fun, but commuting is terrible.
Every morning I spend an hour in a jam-packed train!

B: That's awful

Section Five

77.

Ana ga Attara Hairitai

穴があったら入りたい

77.

“If there were a hole, I’d want to crawl into it.”

(“I’m so ashamed”; “I could’ve died of embarrassment.”)

Sometimes your embarrassment is so acute you want to disappear completely from the scene. Unfortunately, in most cases you’re stuck with braving it out. Yet were there a hole, you’d crawl into it.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informa)

Partii no sekijoo de kyuuni aisatsu o tanomare, taihen komatta koto ga aru. Ki ga dooten shiteru tame ka, jooshi no namae o machigaete itteshimai, hontooni ana ga attara hairitai kimochi datta. Yohan aisatsu o tanomu nara maemotte onegai shite moraereba arigatai mono da.

パーティーの席上で急にあいさつをたのまれ、大変困ったことがある。気が動転していたためか、上司の名前をまちがえて言ってしまい、本当に穴があったら入りたい気持ちだった。やはり、あいさつをたのむなら前もってお願いしてもらえればありがたいものだ。

I was once in big trouble when asked without warning to give a speech at a party. I must have been upset; I used the wrong name in reference to my boss. I wanted to crawl into a hole! It is preferable to ask beforehand if you want someone to give a speech.

78.

Ishibashi o Tataite Wataru

石橋をたたいて渡る

78.

“to tap a stone bridge before crossing it”

(to proceed with caution, to test the waters before jumping in)

Even a bridge made of stone (which on the face of it is sturdier than a wooden bridge) needs to be tested before crossing. The English near-equivalent is “look before you leap.”

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/A - female, B - male)

A: Watashi, doo shite mo kabuken te kau ki ni naranai na.

B: Sore mo ii daroo. “Ishibashi o tataite wataru” tte yuu kotoba mo aru n dashi. Chokin ja amari fuenai kedo, yoojin shita hoo ga anzen daroo na.

A: 私、どうしても株券で買う気にならないの。

B: それもいいだろう。『石橋をたたいて渡る』っていう言葉もあるんがし。貯金じゃ余り増えないけど、用心した方が安全だろうな。

A: I simply don't feel like buying stocks

B: That's OK. They say, “Tap a stone bridge before crossing it.” Keeping your money in savings accounts won't accumulate much, but it's always safe to be cautious.

79.

Kusawake

草分け

79.

"parting the grass"

(pioneering, innovation, original thinking)

The phrase conjures up a man parting the tall grass with his hands. Metaphorically it means leading the way, going where no one has gone before, pioneering.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Kare no onshi wa nihon ni okeru denshi kogaku no kusawake tek: sonzai de, genzai katsuyakuchuu no giutsusha o nannin mo sodateteiru.

彼の恩師は日本における電子工学の草分け的存在で、現在活躍中の技術者を何人も育てている。

His teacher has led a pioneering life in the field of Japanese electronics and has educated many prominent engineers who are currently quite productive.

80.

Onobori-san おのぼりさん

80.

“One who journeys to the capital”

(country bumpkin, hick, hayseed, someone from the sticks)

San in this phrase is the obligatory honorific that translates simply as “Mr.” or “Ms.” Nobori refers to heading toward the capital of Japan. With the addition of the honorific prefix o-, the phrase becomes a satirical reference to the stereotypical lack of sophistication of someone who has come from the “sticks”

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

- A: Kondo nyuusha shite kita Hara-san ne, chihoo no sanson kora jookyoo shite kita n da tte
 B: Aa, sore de na no ne. Ikanimo onobori-san tte kakkoo shiteru no wa.
- A: 今度入社してきた原さんね、地方の山村から上京して来たんだって。
 B: ああ、それでなのね。いかにもおのぼりさんってかっこうしてるのは。
- A: You know the new employee, Ms. Hara? I hear she came to Tokyo from a small mountain village in the country.
 B: Oh, that explains it. She certainly dresses like a country bumpkin.

81.

Sumeba Miyako

住めば都

81.

"Where one lives is the capital city."

(Wherever one lives, one comes to love it.)

Miyako means "the capital," but carries the connotation of the best place, the center of everything, the place to be. This short expression is similar in sentiment to "there's no place like home."

Sample text:

(Style: written/formal)

Watashi wa saisho, Kyushuu wa amari suki dewa arimasen deshita. Shikashi sume ba miyako to iwareru yooni, ima wa koko Kurume ga watashi no daini no furusato na yona ki ga shiteimasu.

私は最初、九州はあまり好きではありませんでした。しかし、住めば都と言われるように、今はここ久留米が私の第一のふるさとのような気がしています。

At first I didn't like Kyushu. But as the saying goes, "Wherever one lives, one comes to love it." Nowadays I feel as if Kurume is my second hometown.

Watari ni Fune

渡りに舟

"a boat to cross on"

(timely assistance, something that saves the day)

Poetically, "when you need to cross the river, luckily you find a boat to take you." The phrase means to "luck out." Used when something fortunate occurs when you need it most. A timely stroke of luck.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Kodomo no mendoo o mite kureru hito o sagashiteta n da kedo, nakanaka ii hito ga inakute ne. Soshitara kyuuni tonari ni choodo ii hito ga utsutte kita no yo. Dooshiyoo ka to komatteita n da kedo, watari ni fune to wa kana koto ne.

A: 子供のめんどうを見てくれる人をさがしてたんだけど、なかなかいい人がいなくてね。そしたら急に隣にちょうどいい人が移って来たのよ。どうしようかと困っていたんだけど、渡りに舟とはこのことね。

A: I was searching everywhere for someone who could look after my child, but I couldn't find anyone. Then all of a sudden the perfect person moved in next door! I was getting desperate, but she saved the day!

83.

Asameshi Mae

朝飯前

83.

“before the morning meal”

(a piece of cake, an easy task)

Meshi literally means cooked rice. The morning's cooked rice (breakfast) is the first source of energy for the day. A task that can be completed even before one's first meal is something requiring almost no effort.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Kanda no koorasu no renshuu ne, yooji de derarenaku natta no. Kiyohara-san piano no bansoo hikiukete kureru kashira

B: Daijoubu desho. Kitto hikiukete kureru n janai? Koorasu no bansoo nante kanojo ni totte wa, honno asameshi mae dashi ne.

A: 今度のコーラスの練習ね、用事で出られなくなったの。清原さんピアノの伴奏引き受けてくれるかしら。

B: 大丈夫でしょ。きっと引き受けてくれるんじゃない? コーラスの伴奏なんて彼女にとっては、ほんの朝飯前だしね。

A: Something's come up, and I can't make the next chorus practice. I was wondering if Ms. Kiyohara would be willing to take over the piano accompaniment.

B: I'm sure she'll substitute for you, all right. For her, playing the accompaniment for the chorus is a piece of cake.

Baka wa Shinanyakya Naoranai

ばかは死ななきゃ治らない

84.

“Only death can cure a fool.”

(Once a fool, always a fool.)

A derogatory term used in reference to someone who consistently demonstrates incompetence or poor judgment. Said in moments of exasperation, the phrase suggests an attitude of “I give up; there’s no hope for you.”

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Aitsu, hantooni zetsubooteiki da ne. Nani yatte mo dame na n da.

B: “Baka wa shinanyakya naoranai” ite ne. Ima sara kaeyoo to shite mo mun daroo.

A: あいつ、本当に絶望的だね。何やってもダメなんだ。

B: 「ばかは死ななきゃ治らない」ってね。今さら変えようとしても無理だろう。

A: He’s hopeless. That idiot can’t do anything right.

B: Well, they say, “Only death can cure a fool.” It’s probably impossible to change him now.

85.

Chan-Pon

ちゃんぽん

85.

“ching-boom”

(a combination of ingredients [often that don't mix well], a medley of elements)

Chan is the sound of a ch me, pon, the sound of a hand drum. When played simultaneously the result is a dissonant, jarring sound. Chan-pon is used to mean the result of mixing things together that should not be mixed, often with unfortunate consequences—whiskey and beer, spaghetti and Japanese miso soup.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Kinoo wa dōo shita no?

B: Sake to biiru o chan-pon ni nonda n de, hidoi futsuka yoi de sa. Totemo asa joggingu ni iku yoona joata janakatta n da

A: きのうはどうしたの?

B: 酒とビールをちゃんぽんに飲んだんで、ひどい日酔いでさ。とても朝ジョギングに行くような状態じゃなかったんだ

A: What happened yesterday?

B: I mixed drinking sake and beer, and I got this terrible hangover. I was in no condition to go jogging in the morning.

86.

Deru Kui wa Utareru

出る杭は打たれる

86.

"The stake that sticks up will be pounded down."

(Excellence is shot down by mediocrity; doing better than others evokes jealousy; difference is forced into conformity.)

Commentary offered in explanation for why a gifted individual who may be head and shoulders above the norm is brought down to size by the members of his or her group. Quite literally, the stake that sticks out above the other stakes in a row is brought into line by being pounded down.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

- A: Takahashi wa atarashii kaisha ni utsutta kedo umaku ikana rashii na
 B: Aitsu, atama ga yosugiru n da. "Deru kui wa utareru" tte yuu daro. Sore ga tamaranai n janai ka, aitsu no koto da kara.
- A: 高橋は新しい会社に移ったけどうまくいかないらしいな。
 B: あいつ、頭が良すぎるんだ。「出る杭は打たれる」って言うだろう。それがたまらないんじゃないか、あいつのここだから。
- A: You know Takahashi, he moved to a new company, but he isn't getting along too well, I hear.
 B: He's too brilliant. "Excellence is shot down by mediocrity," you know. He probably can't stand it, knowing him 87.

Hakoiri Musume

箱入り娘

87.

“a girl that’s kept in a box”

(an innocent girl of a good family, an over-protected daughter)

A pre-war parlor game featured little wooden figures that were moved around (as in a board game). The figures represented members of a typical family and were kept stored in a box. The idealized musume (daughter) came to symbolize the shy, sheltered character of a girl who has never left home (the box). Hakoiri musume refers to an unworldly daughter from a good family.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal/female)

A: Kyoko-san, Amerika ni ryuugaku suru n desu tte

B: Ara, sore, otosan mo okaasan mo OK shita no? Anna hakoiri musume o Amerika ni dasu nanite sazokashi shinpai deshoo nee

A: 京子さん、アメリカに留学するんですって。

B: あら、それ、お父さんもお母さんもOKしたの？ あんな箱入り娘をアメリカに出すなんてさぞかし心配でしょうねえ。

A: I hear Kyoko is going to the States to study.

B: Oh? Did her parents approve? They must be very concerned about sending such an over-protected daughter off all the way to the States.

Juubako no
Sumi o [Yooji de] Tsutsuku

重箱の隅を [ようじで] つつく

“to pick at the corners of a food-serving box [with a toothpick]”

(to be obsessively oriented toward inconsequential details, to dwell on minutiae, to split hairs)

Juubako is a box-shaped container for serving food. After the meal, one or two small pieces of food may remain stuck in the corners. Only an obsessive person would try to remove the left-over particles with a toothpick.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal)

A: Tashiro-san to no hanashi wa zenzen susumanai n desu yo ne. Juubako no sumi o tsutsuku yoona doo demo ii yoona hanashi bakari de, juudaina koto wa minna atomawashi. Kore ja itsu ni nattara saishuu kettei made matte ikeru mono yara

B: Soe na n desu ka. Sore wa taihen desu ne.

A: 田代さんとの話はぜんぜん進まないんですね。重箱の隅をつつくようなどうでもいいような話ばかりで、重大なことはみんなあとまわし。これじゃいつになったら最終決定までもっていけるものやら。

B: そうなんですか。それは大変ですね。

A: Talking with Mr. Tashiro never goes anywhere. He on y dwells on minutiae, and important issues are left behind. I have no idea when the final decision will be made.

B: Is that so? Too bad.

89.

Kataboo o Katsugu

片棒をかつぐ

89.

“to shoulder one’s end of the pole”

(to take part in, to hold up one’s end of the operation, to have a hand in)

In feudal times, palanquin and coffin carriers worked in pairs. The responsibility for lifting and transporting was equally divided. To shoulder one’s end of the pole means to hold up one’s end of the operation, taking full responsibility for being an equal partner.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/A=casual male, B=formal male)

A: Iyaa, ano jiken wa jinjika no Yamada-san ga kataboo o katsuida rashii yo.

B: Yappari soo na n desu ka. Maa, Kawai-san hitori de, anno daisoreta koto o keikaku suru hazu wa nai to omottemashita ga ne

A: いやあ、あの事件は人事課の山田さんが片棒をかついだらしいよ。

B: やっぱりそうなんですか。まあ、川井さんひとりで、あんな大それたことを計画するはずはないと思ってましたかね

A: Well, it appears that Mr. Yamada from the personnel department had a hand in that affair.

B: Just as I guessed. I figured that Mr. Kawai couldn’t possibly have come up with such an ingenious plan all by himself.

90.

Koo'in Ya no Gotoshi

光陰矢のごとし

90.

"Light and darkness fly like an arrow."

(Time flies; time and tide wait for no man.)

Koo means "light"; in means "shadow" or darkness." Together they refer to the passage of light into darkness (day and night)—in other words, time. The sentiment behind the phrase is close to "Life is short."

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal)

Hayai mono de kono kaisha ni haitte kara sanjuunen no nengetsu ga tachimashita. Koo'in ya no gotoshi to iwaremasu ga, watashi ni totte no kono sanjuunen wa amarini mijikakatta to yuu no ga jikkan desu 早いものでこの会社に入ってから、三十年の年月がたちました。「光陰矢のごとし」と言われますが、私にとってのこの三十年は余りに短かったというのが実感です。

It's been 30 short years since I joined this company. As the proverb "Time flies like an arrow" goes, my 30 years have been indeed too short.

91.

Koshikake

腰かけ

91.

“a temporary sitting place”

(a stepping stone for something better, for the next stage)

It's an accepted custom that Japanese women office workers looking for husbands willingly accept menial jobs in corporations. Their position is seen as temporary. Koshikake means a chair, a bench, or a stool; an object upon which one rests briefly. It's easy to see how the phrase would come to mean a stepping stone to the next stage of life (most frequently wife and homemaker).

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Jinjika no Kanai-san, iyo iyo kekkon da tte.

B: Hee, yokatta wa ne. Doose koshikake de tsutometeta n da kara, hayaku aite ga mitsukatte.

A: 人事課の金井さん、いよいよ結婚だって。

B: へーえ、良かったわね。どうせ腰かけで勤めてたんだから、早く相手がみつかって。

A: Did you hear Ms. Kanai is getting married?

B: Really? That's good. Her job here was only a stepping stone anyway. Good for her to have found someone to marry so quickly.

Kusai Mono ni wa Futa o Suru

臭いものにはふたをする

92.

“to cover foul-smelling things”

(to opt for short-term solutions, to [temporarily] push aside and ignore problems)

Offenses to the nose are likely to command immediate attention. But simply to put a lid over the smell is not to make the source of the problem go away. Thus the meaning of a stop-gap or temporary fix.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Ano hokoku de wa, kanpantekina mondai ni genkyuu shiteimai. Yoosuruni “kusai mono ni wa futa o suru” to yuu hooshin na n daroo ga, mondai ga shinkokuka suru no wa, tannaru jikan na mondai to ieru.

あの報告では、根本的な問題に言及していない。要するに「臭いものにはふたをする」という方針なんだろうが、問題が深刻化するの、単なる時間の問題と言える。

That report completely glosses over the fundamental issues. In short, they are taking the position of (temporarily) avoiding and ignoring the problem; but it's merely a matter of time before the problem assumes serious proportions.

93.

Madogiwa Zoku

窓際族

93.

"the window tribe"

(people who have been promoted beyond function, people who have been "kicked upstairs")

The deeply entrenched seniority system of Japanese companies makes it difficult to rise to a top managerial position except after many years of service. Those who fail to attain a top position never enjoy the luxury of a private office, but they may be given a token reward of a desk next to the window in the large, open space where their juniors are also seated. The term "window tribe" refers to people who have been thus rewarded for their years of service but are out of the day-to-day running of the company.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Yamakawa buchou wa seki o utsutta no kai?

B: Aa, tanari no sekushon no oku no hoo e. Himitsu da kedo ne, kare madogiwa zoku no nakamairi shita n da.

A: 山川部長は席を移ったのかい?

B: ああ、隣のセクションの奥の方へ。秘密だけどね、彼窓際族の仲間入りしたんだ。

A: Did Mr. Yamakawa, the manager, move?

B: Yeah, toward the back in the next section. It's supposed to be a secret, but he's been kicked upstairs.

Noren ni Udeoshi

のれんに腕押し

"to push against the entry curtain"

(a useless and completely ineffective action, a wasted effort)

When the noren (curtain with the store name printed on it) is hanging in the doorway of a noodle shop, Japanese restaurant, tea house, or other classically Japanese establishment, the place is "open for business." Since the noren is a hanging cloth, nothing is achieved by pushing one's arm against it. Such is the feeling one experiences when taking an action (through words or deeds) which elicits no response whatsoever.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Dame da na, yappari. Are kore issaokenmei settaku shiyoo to shite mo hannoo nashi. Kore ja mattaku, noren ni udeoshi mo ii toko sa.

B: Yowatta ne

A: だめだな、やっぱり。あれこれ一生懸命説得しようとしても反応なし。これじゃ全く、のれんに腕押しもいいとこさ。

B: 弱ったね。

A: It's not working. I'm trying everything I can to convince him, but there's absolutely no response! It's completely ineffective...

B: Sorry to hear that.

95.

Onaji Kama no Meshi o Kutta

同じ釜の飯を食った

95.

“having eaten rice from the same pot”

(having shared a common experience, having been through a lot together)

Eating rice from the same pot is the Japanese equivalent of “breaking bread together.” Communal eating establishes a sense of friendship and loyalty among those who literally eat out of the same pot. Most often used in reaffirming a special relationship developed through shared experiences.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Doonika tanomu ya. Onaji kama no meshi o kutta naka daroo. Soo tsumetar kota o yuu na ya.

A: どうにかたのむよ。同じ釜の飯を食った仲間だろう。そう冷たいことを言うなよ。

A: Won't you do this for me? Haven't we been through a lot together? Don't disappoint me, huh.

96.

Saji o Nageru

サジを投げる

96.

“to throw away the spoon”

(to give up in despair, to throw in the towel)

In ancient times the Japanese doctor or pharmacist was expected to concoct a special formula that would cure the patient. The pressure to find the correct mixture of ingredients was so great that many a doctor would hurl the measuring spoon into the air in despair. Metaphorically, saji o nageru means to give up out of frustration. Often the phrase is used as an admonishment not to give up.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Kyooikusha naru mono wa, donna gakusei ni taishite mo saji o nagete wa naranai. Ningen wa dare de mo nanika no kakusaneta sainoo ga aru mono da kara dearu.

教育者なるものは、どんな学生に対してもサジを投げてはならない。人間は誰でも何かの隠された才能があるものだからである。

Educators must not give up on any student, for every human being has some ability yet to be tapped.

97.

Sashimi no Tsuma

刺身のつま

97.

"garnish for raw fish"

(insignificant participant, uninfluential presence)

However attractive, the garnish that accompanies a serving of sashimi is of no significance. Some people may not even notice its presence. Such is the degree of dismissal sashimi no tsuma carries when used in discounting the importance of a person's attendance at a meeting or gathering.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/female)

A: Yuri-san to yuushoku ni iku yotei janakatta no?

B: Dooze watashi ga shusseki shite mo sashimi no tsuma da kara dotchi, demo ii no ya.

A: ゆりさんと夕食に行く予定じゃなかったの?

B: どうせ私が出席しても刺身のつまだからどっちでもいいのよ。

A: Weren't you supposed to go to a dinner party with Yuri?

B: Well, even if I attend, my presence there doesn't really matter, so it's not important if I go or not.

98.

Sode no Shita

袖の下

98.

"under one's sleeve"

(under the table, off the books, bribery)

The large sleeve of the Japanese kimono makes for an ideal place to hide or to hand-off money. Today kimonos are seldom worn by Japanese men (and almost never when transacting business), but the phrase sode no shita is still very much in use. It has come to mean primarily some form of bribe.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/casual/male)

A: Naze anna an ga tootta n daroo.

B: linchoo ga sode no shita demo moratteru n daroo.
Soo demo nakya toaru hazu nai ya.

A: なぜあんな案が通ったんだろう。

B: 委員長が袖の下でもらってるんだろう。そうでもなきゃ通るはずないよ。

A: I wonder why that proposal passed.

B: Maybe the committee chairman was given some sort of bribe. Otherwise, it should never have passed.

Suna o Kamu Yoo

砂をかむよう

“like chewing sand”

(dull, unhappy, and wearisome [life])

Most often used to describe a dull, uninteresting life. It's hard to imagine a more tasteless experience than having to eat (or chew) sand day in and day out. The phrase connotes a dull, bad-tasting, and unhappy life.

Sample text:

(Style: written/informal)

Hannin wa tsuma o koroshite kara gonengan, takai no katasumi de tooboo seikatsu o akutta. Jikyoo ni yoruto, seishinteki ni mo busshitsuteki ni mo kurushiku, shakai kara koritsu shiteita tome, mainichi ga ajike naku, masani suna o kamu yoona seikatsu datta to yuu.

犯人は妻を殺してから五年間、都会の片すみで逃亡生活を送った。自供によると、精神的にも物質的にも苦しく、社会から孤立していたため、毎日が味気なく、まさに砂をかむような生活だったと言う。

The murderer, after killing his wife, spent five years as a fugitive. According to his confession, he suffered both mentally and materially and, living isolated from society, he led a dull, unhappy, and wearisome life.

100.

Taikoban o Osu

太鼓判を押す

100.

“to stamp a drum-size seal”

(to vouch enthusiastically for a person, to recommend highly, virtually to guarantee a person's success)

On official documents in Japan, a name-stamp is used rather than a signature. Seals vary in size and shape, but generally the bigger the seal, the greater the status. The seal for a university, for example, will be larger and more impressive looking than the seal for an individual. Metaphorically, a “drum-size seal” is an enthusiastic endorsement, often used as a strong recommendation.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal/male)

A: Aa, Kawakami ga ataku no kaisha ni nyuusha shita n desu ka. Kare wa yuushuu deshite ne. Hitogara wa watashi ga taikoban o oshimasu yo.

A: ああ、川上がおたくの会社に入社したんですか。彼は優秀でしてね。人柄は私が太鼓判を押しますよ。

A: Oh, Kawakami is now at your company? He's brilliant, isn't he? And I can highly recommend his personality, too.

101.

Yuushuu no Bi o Kazaru

有終の美を飾る

101.

“to decorate the ending with beauty”

(to achieve something great just before the end [of one's career], to end with a flourish, to go out with a bang)

Equivalent to the positive tone of “ending on a high note,” this expression refers to getting a well-deserved bump of recognition immediately before ending one's career.

Sample text:

(Style: spoken/formal)

Kawamura sensei wa sanjuugonenkan ni watari, kyooiku hitosuji ni doryoku shite korare mashita ga, kondo zannenni mo taishoku nasaru koto ni narimashita. Sakunendo wa honkoo ga ongaku konkuru de ken daiichii ni narimashita ga, kore wa hitaeni Kawamura sensei no go-shidao ni yoru mono deshita. Masani yuushuu no bi o kazatte kudasatta wake de arimasu.

川村先生は三十五年間に渡り、教育一筋に努力してこられました。こんで残念にも退職なさることになりました。昨年度は本校が音楽コンクールで県第一位になりましたが、これはひとえに川村先生の御指導によるものでした。正に有終の美を飾ってくださったわけでありませう。

Mr. Kawamura has for 35 years dedicated himself to education, and now we are all sorry to learn that he is retiring. Last year our school ranked first in the prefectural music contest; this was all possible only because of his leadership. He certainly has ended his career with a flourish.
